3.0 KEY ACCOMPLISHMENTS

1. The audit report of the pilot registries
The report outlines the business processes of the Ministry of Lands on various transactions. It also succinctly and gives possible solutions as follows:
   a) A multifaceted approach to fighting corruption at the registries
   b) Clear and proper channels of communication within Ministry of Lands and with other key stakeholders
   c) Cooperation and partnership with key stakeholders in the land reform process.
   d) Comprehensive legal framework for land registration systems.

The Report was a used as a point of reference in discussing the then National Land commission Bill, the Land Registration Bill and the Land Bill. The Program Coordinator, the Consultant and the members of the Law Society of Kenya Conveyancing and Land Reform Committee actively participated in lobbying parliament to extend time (by 60 days) to allow for consideration of various proposed amendments.

The Report was also used extensively in a retreat organized by the Parliamentary Committee on Land and Natural Resources to consider proposed amendments and memoranda.

2. Training of Land Officials
The training of land officials on constitutional provisions of land and change management was highly successful due to the following reasons;
   a) It flagged out the issues that Ministry of Lands feel hamper reforms
   b) It set out areas that need urgent reforms within the Ministry of Lands
   c) The officials gained more understanding on the legal framework on land and implementation of change.
   d) The outcome will form a basis and platform for the Ministry to implement recommendations.

3. Enhanced working relationship between key stakeholders in the land reform process
The entire project enhanced the working relationship between the Law Society and the Ministry of Land who are key stakeholders in land reform issues. This has created a concerted effort to achieving reforms and implementing change. Indeed both parties have shown the willingness to initiate other processes that will effect the spirit of the Constitution and accelerate the reform process.
4.0 LESSONS LEARNED
Throughout the project it emerged that a clear analysis and understanding of the existing legal framework, the existing systems and work ethics at the land registries is important in drawing a roadmap for reform within the Ministry. This is because the audit brought out myriad issues that cause inefficiency and hinder reform in the sector.

It was also quite evident that all key stakeholders and users of the registries must be involved in the reform process for it to be successful and impactive. This is because land issues are emotive and heavily riddled with historical mistakes and injustices. Indeed there must be a sustained effort to implement reform. It was noted during the training that isolated reform agenda yielded very minimal results. It would be therefore prudent to have incremental but highly concentrated and focused plans.

Another lesson learnt is that collaboration and concerted efforts between the Ministry of Lands and key stakeholders like the Law Society of Kenya can yield results and speed up the reform process. This was evident during the roundtable meeting that brought together professionals within the land sector.

It was also obvious that majority of the officials within the land registries are just as eager for change as the users and willing to grant stakeholders opportunities to effect change.

5.0 CHALLENGES
The implementation of the project was fairly smooth. However this being and in kind grant there was limited influence in the decision making process which resulted to delays in certain activities. The project was also slightly marred by unfavorable evaluation by partners arising due to communication breakdown.

6.0 PROPOSED NEXT STEPS
The Law Society of Kenya is of the view that further discussions and training of land officials on the effect of the Constitution, attendant legislations and change management should be sustained especially for those outside Nairobi.

It is also evident that there is need to create awareness amongst the public on land reforms and the current Constitutional implications on management of land. This will manage the rising temperatures on matters dealing with land especially during this time of elections.
The main challenge in most registries is record keeping. Law Society of Kenya proposes that there be a clear process on authentication and automation of land records especially in major registries.
